

COMP 110-001 Spring 2009

Homework 0 (5 points)

Assigned: Monday, Jan 12

Due: Wednesday, Jan 14 in class

Print, complete, and hand in this assignment in class on Wed. Jan 14th.

- Tell me a bit about yourself, including the following:
 - Name
 - UNC email address
 - Major
 - Are you free during at least one of these office hours?
(M 2:00-3:00 PM, TH 10:00-11:00 AM)
 - If you've had previous programming experience and what language

 - Reason for taking COMP 110

 - What you hope to learn in COMP 110

 - Do you have a laptop? If so, which operating system are you using (Windows? Mac OS X?)?

- In your AFS space (drive H: on the UNC lab computers), create a new folder named comp110.
 - It would be a good idea to put all of your COMP 110 assignments inside this folder since your AFS space is automatically backed up by UNC.
 - You may also want to put a copy of this comp110 folder on your laptop or home computer.

- Review and sign the honor code pledge on the following page

COMP 110-001 Spring 2009

Honor Code

Please be sure you are familiar with the computer science department's honor code, located at <http://www.cs.unc.edu/Admin/Courses/HonorCode.html>.

For this course, the guidelines are as follows:

- You may never share code, unless otherwise specified.
- You may not show your program to another student so that he or she can copy it or see how it works.
- You may discuss general approaches for the assignments, but all code and write-ups must be your own, and you must be able to explain your code.
- Exams and quizzes are to be entirely your own work. You may not collaborate with other students or use any computers, books, notes, or previously completed assignments.

If, having read the above, you still feel the urge to cheat, keep in mind that it is especially easy to detect cheating in computer science courses. If two programs are exactly the same or markedly similar, your instructor will know. Any such instances of cheating will be referred to the UNC honor court.

I acknowledge the honor code guidelines above and pledge to neither give nor receive unauthorized aid in this course.
